

Law and Lawyers: Or Sketches and Illustrations of Legal History and Biography, Vol. 1 of 2 (Classic Reprint)

Sir William Jones has observed, that the only road to the highest stations in this country, is that of the law :and, probably, it is to a general conviction of this kind that we owe the multitude of aspirants for its honors and dignities. There is no profession in the country, in whose character and prospects so much interest is felt, and which exercises so important an influence upon our social and political relations. Those who are the most prominent in its ranks are well known to the public, and there are few persons to be met with who are not, more or less, connected with some one belonging to it. At the bar and on the bench, have been found those, Sir (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and do not occur in the book.)
